HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.

He respectfully refers to the following

CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EASTERN DATES TO AUGUST 3.

BY THE CABLES.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Evening.—An official dispatch from Metz announces that to-day at 11 o'clock the French had a serious engagement with the Prussians. Our army took the offensive, crossed the frontier and invaded the territory of Prussia in spite of numbers and position of the enemy. A few of our battalions were sufficient to carry the heights which overlook Saarbrucken, and our artillery were not slow to drive the enemy from the town. Our loss is slight. The engagement commenced at 11 and ended at 1. The Emperor assisted at the operations, and the Prince Imperial, who accompanied him everywhere, received, on the first field of battle, his baptism of fire. His presence of mind and sang froid in danger were worthy of the name he bears.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Prussia demands explanation from Austria why she is arming.

German journals are terribly exasperated against England because the latter continues to furnish supplies to France.

The Empress visited the French army and was received with immense enthusiasm.

Figaro announces that the Government has refused the offer of General Sheridan to serve in the French army.

The first installment of French troops from Rome has arrived at Marseilles.

VIENNA, Aug. 2.—Austria is mobilizing 50,000 men to watch Bohemia.

A correspondent says Beust has positive proof that in 1866 Prussia offered to France cession of Belgium in return for aid against Austria.

MAYENCE, Aug. 2—10 A. M.—King William arrived this morning with several members of his staff.

ROME, Aug. 2.—Italy is concentrating troops on the Roman frontier.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The presence of armies on the frontier of France and Rhenish Provinces of Prussia has given rise to serious apprehensions of famine there.

Evidence hourly accumulates of the superiority of the needle gun over the Chassepot, and the fact creates deep concern in France.

The Pall Mall Gazette estimates the Prussian army now on the frontiers at 500,000 men.

Extreme activity is noticed in English ports and dock yards. Extensive preparations are being made to put the coast defences in a condition to resist attack.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—In the Council of Ministers on Saturday, a supplementary appropriation list was agreed to after a hard struggle.

It is understood that Earl Granville is in favor of giving distinct notification to France and Prussia of England's determination to maintain independence of Belgium and Luxembourg. It is said that Gladstone is determined not to yield to the growing feeling of the people against the Ministry. The Times thinks the neutrality laws are inadequate and need amending. It publishes letters representing that English defences are in a deplorable state; and English cavalry and artillery are inadequate to compete with any formidable enemy. Army transports are imperfect for the conveyance of troops, and there are only 25,000 men available to garrison the whole Kingdom.

Russia indignantly repudiates the design with which she has been charged of taking advantage of war in Europe to invade the Danubian principalities.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The Herald's cable special from Florence, August 2, says in conformity with the decision of the Council of Generals held on the 23d ult., the effective force of the Italian army is being rapidly raised to 120,000, a camp of 20,000 being established between Mantua and Verona. Two camps of observation are forming on the Pontifical frontier. It is the intention of the Italian Government to enter Rome as soon as the French army withdraws, on the plea of protection.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Private dispatches report a naval engagement on Wednesday, at the mouth of the Elbe in which a Prussian gunboat was sunk. Gen. Falkenstein has issued a proclamation to the people on the coast of North and Baltic seas calling on them to arise against invasion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The Tribune's London special gives the conclusion of the debate in the House of Commons. Secretary Cardwell and Gladstone were cheered, and so was the Secretary of War when he stated that the army is at present only 2,560 men below its establishment of 175,000. Disraeli's declaration for armed neutrality was applauded on the conservative side. It is more clear than ever that popular feeling goes beyond the Government. There are not wanting members of Parliament or journals who would prohibit France from buying arms or coal. Gladstone's strong point was in proving that the English military force, so far from being diminished was augmented.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—It is generally admitted by the French that their hesitancy sacrificed their advantage of an early start. They might have overwhelmed Germany, but France is now compelled to act on the defensive.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A private dispatch reports that a Prussian corps is on the line of the Saar, between Saarburg and Saarbrucken and an equally large force, under Prince Frederick Charles, will occupy a position between Saarbrucken and Sewbrucken. The Crown Prince, with the South German troops, the Prussian Royal Guard and one northern army corps is coming up on the left.

New York News.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The export of specie today was $948,745.

Twenty-two American yachts have been officially entered for the Queen's Cup race, including the America, Phantom, Dauntless, Idler, Tidal Wave and Madeline. The Dauntless will be sailed by Captain Brown, who sailed the America in 1857. His son sails the America. Betting is strong on both these vessels.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The North Pacific Railroad has filed with the Secretary of the Interior its first mortgage upon its franchise.

PRESENCE OF MIND BY A YOUNG GIRL.—The Erie (Pa.) Republican of July 9th relates this remarkable instance of coolness and judgment on the part of a girl of twelve years:

Some two or three weeks since the propeller Fountain City had a narrow escape from being burned on her downward trip from Buffalo. The particulars of the case which we believe have not been published, were furnished by a gentleman of this city. It appears that a Mrs. Fannie Lamb, who resides a short distance from Chicago, took passage for Buffalo on board the Fountain City, taking her daughter Annie, a child twelve years of age, with her. The day after the departure of the boat the little girl, going into the kitchen, remarked that the stove smoked considerably, to which the cook replied that she was mistaken. The child had heard her mother often say that she dreaded going on a boat for fear of fire. With this in her mind, and taking another look at the place where the smoke seemed to come from, she discovered that it did not issue from the stove. Going on back, she discovered the woodwork around the smokestack on fire and the flames just eating their way into the cabin. Without giving any general alarm, she went to the steward and told him the boat was on fire. He informed the mate, who called the deck hands aft, and they extinguished the fire without one of the passengers being aware that anything of the kind had occurred. There were twenty-two ladies sitting on deck in the bow of the boat, among them the mother of Annie, while this was going on. After the work had been done Annie went to her mother and says, "Don't be frightened, mother; the boat has been on fire, but it is all over now." The Captain was so greatly pleased with the cool, calm and quiet manner in which the child performed her part that he refunded the passage money of both and offered to take them back to Chicago free of charge. It was a brave act, to say the least, and had she screamed "Fire!" as most persons would have done, with so many ladies on board, the consequences might have been of a very serious nature. She deserves a handsome testimonial of some kind. Both mother and daughter have been visiting their friends in this city during the past week, and left for Buffalo Monday night.

Dead and Alive.

TEN HOURS A CORPSE AND DRESSED FOR THE GRAVE—THE FALL OF A MAN'S COFFIN BRINGS HIM TO LIFE.

[From the Detroit Free Press, July 10.]

Among the passengers at the Detroit and Milwaukee depot on Saturday was a group of three—husband, wife and a male relative—whose actions attracted the attention of Officer O'Connor, inasmuch as the husband had a ghastly expression of countenance, was kept muffled up in an overcoat and shawl, the wife was tender and solicitous, and the friend was eagerly impatient for the hour of departure. As the officer was several times appealed to for information, he at length made bold to inquire as to the invalid's apparent sickness. While waiting for the train to go, and making sure that the husband wanted nothing more, the friend, whose name is William J. Bently, related to the officer a tale rather singular concerning the travelers, and our reporter had word sent to him to interview the group, and get the facts in the case from their own lips.

The invalid gave us the name of John Hart, being about thirty-five years old, and his home is at Great Barrington, Massachusetts. For several years past his health has been gradually failing, he being of a consumptive turn, and, about a year ago, he had a shock of paralysis which left his arm almost useless, and somewhat disfigured his face by twitching the mouth to one side. Some two months ago, hoping that the Western climate would work a beneficial change in his health, Hart and his wife made a journey to her sister's, at Bridgeport, Wisconsin. The bracing air seemed to work a change, and the invalid had hopes that he would soon be able to throw aside his cane. It was noticeable that his eyes had a bright expression, his skin displayed a ruddy hue, and Hart felt so well in three weeks time that he even talked of locating in the West and wrote letters looking toward the sale of his property in Massachusetts.

On the 19th of June, about nine o'clock in the evening, the family, as well as a neighbor or two who had dropped in, sat together on a verandah conversing together at times, and again listening to the voice of a young lady who was singing and playing upon an accordeon. Hart had felt unusually well all day, and his appearance was so much more favorable as to have been a subject of congratulation among those present. Gradually, as the young lady sang, a curious feeling came over him, as he sat in a rocking-chair, with his limbs stretched out at length over a stool. He describes the feeling to have been like the strange numbness that is felt when a member of the body "gets asleep," which all of us have experienced, only the feeling seemed to start first around the heart, spreading thence all over the body. There was no pain, no alarm, but the sensation was rather agreeable, as it seemed to modify all the sharp notes of the song, every word of which could be distinctly heard by Hart. After the song, he heard the words of admiration expressed, and was about to make an effort to shake off the stupor, when the white column of the verandah just in front of him grew dimmer and dimmer, until it faded away in a mist, and then the man's eyelids fell, and he thought to himself that he was going to sleep. Instead, he commenced to think more rapidly than before, and to feel that he ought to start right up: the voices did not die away, and he heard the farewell words of a woman who took her leave. As she went the group arose to go into the house, Mrs. Hart approaching her husband with a "Come, John, let's go in." He could not move, his whole body felt as if asleep, and no exertion of strength or will could stir a finger. Seeing that he did not move, the wife laid her hand on his shoulder, shook him slightly, and repeated, "Come, John, we are going to bed."

He tried to move, realizing that he tried, but he was like stone, only feeling that he lived, and that he knew all that was transpiring around him. "John's really gone off into a nap," said the wife to the others who stood near, at the same time shaking him, and then she playfully seized the chair by the back and pulled it part way over, thinking that the fear of a fall would wake him. As the chair tipped Hart's body fell over the arm to the side, falling as would a bag of sand, his head striking heavily against Bently, his brother-in-law, who had approached. The group immediately became alarmed, feeling of his heart, dashing water into his face, and Mrs. Hart commenced crying, saying that she believed John was dead.

They picked him up, carried him into the bedroom, where his slippers and clothing were quickly removed. Hart heard every word, knew just what they did, but every feeling except that in his brain was benumbed, and he could not tell when his garments were taken off, so numb and unfeeling was his flesh. While his wife and sister were getting blankets, liquor and the like, Bently ran to the gate and sent a boy for the doctor, and Hart, through the open window, distinctly heard the words, "Tell him not to loose a single minute." The women were both weeping and lamenting, the wife reproaching herself for fancied carelessness, and Bently tried to cheer her up, saying it was a fit of some kind, which the doctor would easily throw off. Hart did not care much, feeling that it would all turn out a funny joke that they could laugh over; nor was he frightened when the doctor, after feeling his pulse, his heart, and trying in vain to open the fast-closed mouth, told Bently that the man was dead with heart disease, and that no doctor on earth could raise him.

Perhaps all of us have heard the wails and sobs that are uttered around the couch of the dead and dying, and have ourselves felt the cutting grief that comes of seeing the light of life fade out of the body and soul of a dear friend, and there is no need to tell of the scene around this bed. After a time, Bently went away, and when he came back, Hart realized that a man came with him to measure "the corpse" for its coffin. Soon after several men came in, "the body" was removed to the parlor, a table was drawn out, a board brought in, and the living dead was washed and wrapped in a sheet. To show how active the mind was in the dead body, Hart stated that when the table was drawn out, one of the castors caught and tore a hole in the carpet, the sound and the result particularly impressing itself on his mind. After the body was laid out Mrs. Bently came in, and there was whispering and talking about a shroud, other ladies came in, and it was finally decided to enshroud the corpse in a suit of black, a new one and the very suit that the man had on when he gave us these facts. The men put the clothing on the corpse, lifting it this way and that, and a scar on one of the arms was noticed and spoken of.

And then there was a change in the feeling of the man. He knew that he was laid out, that his coffin was making, that the windows had all been opened, and two men were 'watching,' talking in low tones over the sudden demise, and one of them related a similar incident that he had heard of. The brain began to get numb, the voices died away to a murmur, the sounds from the street came fainter and the dead man felt as if swimming in the air and at last he remembered nothing more. There was no dream, no more feeling or thinking. Did you ever wake up quietly, of your own accord, and yet be still, your eyes open and seeing, but your resting place so agreeable that you did not care to move, and desired to remain just so, without any harsh noise breaking the quiet spell? There was no sudden shock, no warning voice, but the eyes opened and the flesh resumed its feeling, the brain worked, and the man, resting on his back, on his "dead board," knew not but that he was in bed, and that his awakening was as usual. He missed his wife, and thought to himself that she had crept softly out to let him have a quiet morning nap. He heard a cow bell tinkle, heard the boys shouting, heard sounds about the house, and thought how curious it was, as he believed it was not yet light, owing to the cloth over his face, which shut out the light, but its presence and dampness had not yet been realized. As he lay there just struggling out of his stupor, Hart heard slow and heavy steps approaching: they came through the hall, through the dining-room, into the parlor, close up to him, and there was an exclamation and a fall, and the dead man sat up on his board! It was the accidental fall of his coffin which had started him up!

The surprise, alarm, joy—all could be depicted, but there is no need. The man was confined to his bed until about the first of July, when he was pronounced able to travel and on Saturday the three were at the depot to continue their journey, having remained in the city over night. Bently was with them for the purpose of aiding the invalid when necessary. The facts above have been given as near as possible in the words of Hart, not overdrawn or exaggerated in the least. There were several present when he gave his case to our reporter, who will vouch for the correctness of this account.

The War and American Interests.

[From the N. Y. Mail, July 20.]

The war between France and Prussia will affect American interests in a variety of ways. Its main effect, however, will be in the improvement of our commerce. Should the contest continue for six months or more the ocean carrying trade would largely seek American vessels, thus stimulating our ship-building interest and greatly assisting in the development of our merchant service. Had Congress passed the bill suggested by the President authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury "to issue American-registers to iron-built ships of not less than 1,000 tons burden, purchased by citizens of the United States in foreign countries and owned by them," the benefits to our commerce would no doubt have been more marked, and it is to be regretted that Congress did not take time to consider this fact in all its bearings.

Another effect of the war will be in the improvement of our market for breadstuffs, which already exhibits indications of a healthy appreciation in values. On the other hand, it is probable that large quantities of our bonds, now held in Germany, will come back upon us, for a time, no doubt, unfavorably influencing our finances, but this effect can hardly be permanent, and will be more than compensated by advantages arising in other directions.

The foreign mail service, performed so satisfactorily by the German and French steamers, will, of course, be interrupted by the war, at least for a time. The German line has already suspended; but we are glad to see that Mr. Washburne has been instructed to make an effort to secure from the French government a recognition of the neutrality of all vessels of the line which have contracts with this government for the mail service. It is believed that Prussia would promptly accord the same recognition to the French transatlantic line. It is feared, however, that France will not consent, simply because her commerce is in no present danger from the Prussian navy, while that of Germany will be most wholly cut off. Members of the Cabinet who have been consulted, say that they can see no way by which these foreign mail steamers can derive any benefit from the fact of existing American contracts, except through the mutual arrangements of the belligerents. In the meantime it is altogether likely that several American steamers will be put afloat, and of course they will take the mails. This, however, does little toward mitigating the hardships of the situation. The President, it is thought, will decline to call an extra session of Congress unless the situation shall assume a much graver aspect than it now presents.

Quacks—How they Flourish in New York.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

One of the finest houses in Union Square has been taken by the so-called Chinese doctor, Lum Ling Law, who claims to possess great numbers of wonderful medicines unknown to American doctors, and to be able to cure innumerable diseases heretofore considered incurable. It would not be surprising if he made as great a success as many of our other medical charlatans of this city. Some of the quacks have enormous revenues. There is one on Broadway, consumption curer, and cure-all doctor, whose annual income for years past, has been between $100,000 and $125,000. He has constantly an average of between 4,000 and 5,000 patients, located all over the country, most of whom communicate with him by letter, and to whom he transmits advice and prescriptions by post and express. His establishment is regularly organized, and is kept constantly running, though he himself is absent more than half of the time in other cities where he has other establishments. His letters from patients number over one hundred a day, and he has about a dozen men and women engaged in reading, classifying and answering them, and putting up the medicine for them. The whole machinery moves with regularity, though he himself never reads or answers any of the letters of his distressed but hopeful correspondents. There is no reason why he should know anything of the case. His clerks can attend to the business as well as himself. He has some half dozen or dozen medicines, two or more of which he administers for consumption and every sort of complaint; and it only requires a little experience on the part of the clerks to classify every case in a big book under some given head, which requires a certain kind or kinds of medicine.

His constant supplies of victims are drawn mainly from the "intelligent rural population" of the eastern and western States.

There are a score or more of other great and successful medical quacks in New York, several of whom are no less successful than the Broadway charlatan here mentioned.

The Value of Immigration

Some political [illegible] that each [illegible] is worth to the State the sum of [illegible] thousand dollars. We have no idea of the basis on which the estimate is based or the qualifications which are attached to it. Taking the proposition as correct in the main, there are certain qualifications to be attached. Not persons of all classes, including capitalists who do nothing more than cut off coupons for a livelihood, down to those who merely serve the passions and unnatural appetites of mankind, are certainly not worth a thousand dollars apiece to the State if that sum be the value of the man that follows the plow or swings the hammer. The non producer is worth no more to the public than what he consumes, and it has been frequently demonstrated that the cost of maintaining a man is much less than a thousand dollars. But throwing further speculation aside and admitting that a thousand dollars is the average value of men and women generally to the State the body politic, we then see the importance of every State aiding in securing this kind of capital. The great mass of it must both work and eat, and once located in a State the effect upon the whole mass of the population, in the general enlivening of trade and encouragement of all kinds of industry is at once apparent. So well is this understood in the Western States of the Mississippi valley, that most all of them have agents at Castle Garden to meet the foreign immigrant and direct them to the particular State, and other agents at Chicago, Milwaukee and other central Western cities to distribute the human tide as it flows out to the inviting prairies of the Great West.

The same principle is also brought to bear in the construction of the hundreds of new railroads in the West. It is so well understood by capitalists dealing in these railroad enterprises that the probability and prospect of a large immigration to the line of a proposed railroad forms one of the first inducements to take hold of the road, and just in proportion as bone and muscle, settlers and families flock to a new road in the same proportion are the bonds of the road appreciated in Wall street among men "who toil not themselves." Capitalists and bankers selling railroad bonds seem to understand the question, or at least appreciate better than statesmen. Politicians (statesmen are scarce) will quarrel over a dog law, or labor for weeks to get Mr. Muggins into some contemptible petty office, and thus squander the people's money and time that should be spent in useful legislation, while two or three railroad men will get together and in less than three days will organize and set in operation a scheme to send agents to Prussia, Norway, Sweden and other European States to induce immigration and sell railroad lands not even earned by the construction of their railroad, but which is bonded in the money markets of the world, and hundreds of miles of iron and millions of money advanced to carry out the grand scheme, which seems more the province of statesmen, and certainly illustrates more statesmanlike ability than is generally supposed to lurk in the dens of Wall and Broad streets.

And it is the check to the operation of this principle that renders the Franco-Prussian war a damage in one aspect to the United States. It was the people of North Germany that were coming, and whom we desired to come to this country as permanent settlers. The Prussians had confidence in this country and were coming in large numbers, and this is one reason of the sympathy in this country with Prussia, but French immigrants were "few and far between."

European capitalists might send back our bonds by the million, but that would make but little odds to the permanent welfare of the State. We might buy them or not as we chose; but when the bone and muscle, the sturdy yeoman with his wife and little ones are stopped at the frontier, or at his sailing port, and turned back as food for war, our loss is direct and permanent, and it is not his gain by any means.

It is stated by the London Evening Globe that the authorities in Madrid, always looking out like Micawber for something to turn up, have discussed the propriety of bringing forward Prince Alphonso, second son of the King of Portugal, as a candidate for the Spanish crown. He is rather young, having been born on the 31st of July 1865, but it was thought that perhaps his father, Prince Ferdinand, might be induced to act as regent during his minority. The boy prince, who is Duke of Oporto, is very rich in Christian names, which are Alfonso-Henri-Louis-Pierre-d'Alcantara-Charles-Humbert-Amedeus-Ferdinand-Antonio-Michel-Raphael-Gabriel-Gonzaga-Xavier-Francisco d'Assise-Juan-Augusto-Julio-Volfando-Ignacius de Braganza Savoie-Bourbon-Saxe Coburg et Gotha!—Twenty-six in all! His sponsors must have taken breath once or twice while publicly enumerating them at the altar.

It is becoming more and more apparent that an act should have passed Congress authorizing the registry of foreign built vessels purchased and owned by American citizens. An Eastern commercial paper says: "Such an act would have caused the transfer to our merchants of a whole fleet of Prussian commercial vessels now lying idle in various ports, which might at once be put into the neutral carrying trade now likely to grow to large dimensions. Such a registry is essential to the safety of the ship and is forbidden as our laws now stand. The result will be that every neutral commercial nation but this is likely to enrich itself by a large and thriving trade." President Grant strongly urged the repeal or modification of this law in the closing hours of the late session, and a mistake was made when it was given the go-by. The loss of this trade may do our people much mischief.

The extension of home industry in all its diversified ways is the building up of the homes of the people and adding increasing strength to the agricultural interests especially. If a bushel of wheat is sent out of the country the farmer sells a part of the constituents of his soil with it, and the process impoverishes the land. If he sells it for consumption at home all that is valuable remains in the country and may be again applied to the renewal of his lands. The country at large is nourished and strengthened by its own labor as naturally as the organs of the body in taking nourishing food. Depleting the soil and trafficking in its essential elements with distant countries for products which would employ our own workmen can never be a source of permanent national prosperity.

President Grant paid $32 000 for his Long Branch cottage with furniture.

Our German American fellow citizens who [illegible] aspire to [illegible] at the [illegible] treaty [illegible] the [illegible] and Prussian Governments in regard to the rights of Germans naturalized in this country. But for the negotiation of this treaty all Prussian Americans found in Prussia at this time would have been liable for service [illegible] the army [illegible] of the State of North [illegible] Americans have [illegible] native born Americans. The treaty was negotiated at a most opportune time and it will save [illegible] government from a great deal of trouble.

The enterprising journals of Gotham have for some time been felicitating themselves over the prospect of a battle on the Atlantic [illegible] near that city between certain war vessels of France and Prussia which were supposed to be lying in New York bay. These vessels it now appears have gone out [illegible] ploughing the raging seas, and the anticipated naval battle in American waters is [illegible] indefinitely postponed.

The Next Senator

[From the Jacksonville Sentinel]

Our neighbor is not yet perfectly easy over the next Senatorial contest. George H Williams still breaks in upon his speculations as to who will be the next United States Senator from Oregon and fills his mind with unpleasant apprehensions.

Well knowing the great weakness of a Democratic Legislature he takes time by the forelock and preaches a moral sermon against legislative bribery.

This shaft is avowedly leveled at the head of that great dread of Oregon Democracy, Ben Holladay. It was undoubtedly thrown out to get an expression from the various members of the next Legislature to the effect that they would not sell out to Ben Holladay and then of course they would not do it.

There is an evident design to commit the Democratic legislators to the cause of public virtue. But really neighbor, we think your fears are without grounds. We deem your threatened bribery a fanciful creation of your own merely, and do not think anybody is going to be seriously alarmed over it.

Our railroad interests are just now at their most important crisis, and we have no scruples in asserting that they are at this time of paramount importance to the people of Southern Oregon. Whatever opposition any of our fellow citizens, in this section, may have felt in any of the political acts of Senator Williams in the matter of reconstruction, he is, unquestionably, the champion of railroads for that portion of Oregon south of the Calapooia mountains, as well as of the rest of the State. Mr Williams has labored zealously and effectually for the best interests of each and every portion of the State he represented in the Senate of the United States, and it is to his singlehanded efforts in the Senate, we repeat it, that the people of Jackson, Josephine and Douglas counties have to day a chance left for securing a railroad through their section of the State. This contest over the line of the railway from Humboldt into Western Oregon is not yet decided, and that decision depends vitally, we may say wholly, on the man who is chosen U S Senator at the next session of our next legislature.

We repeat our assertion of some weeks ago that unless that man, whoever he may be, is a man of ability and influence in the Senate and an uncompromising advocate of a railroad through Southern Oregon, our highest interests will be sacrificed. We have not said that "unless we send Judge Williams to the United States Senate again we could never have a railroad in Oregon," but we have said, and we now repeat it with the fullest assurance of being correct, that unless the next Senator from Oregon is a faithful, energetic and powerful defender of the railroad interests of Southern Oregon, those interests would be lost to her, and we certainly do not know of any one who would be more likely to watch over and defend those interests than Senator Williams.

He has been tried and not found wanting on this great question.

If our cotemporary will find us another man, who would champion a railroad through Southern Oregon as well as Senator Williams, we would be pleased to have his name.

On the great living question of the day, the indiscriminate naturalization of foreigners by striking the word "white" from the naturalization laws, Mr Williams has spoken in the Senate the almost unanimous sentiment of the people on the Pacific coast. His reply to Senator Sumner in the great debate on this question on the 4th of July 1870, ought at this time to be read and carefully pondered by every intelligent citizen in the State. Its strong utterances in behalf of the laborer and in behalf of good society and government are such as appeal both to the head and the heart.

To cry down our Senator for his action on political questions now irreversibly settled, and ignore his position on the living questions of the day, as our cotemporary is disposed to do, is a vengeance on the past indeed, but a policy in conflict with our present and future welfare.

CURRENT NOTES

While most of our people are sympathizing with Prussia in her present struggle against France, it is curious to note that one of the most formidable vessels in the Navy of Louis Napoleon was devised and built in this country by Americans for the use of our government. We allude to the immense iron plated ram Rochambeau, more familiar to our readers as the Dunderberg.

The last number of the Hearth and Home contains an article on the present rage for physical exercises. While cordially approving of the cultivation of muscle the writer thinks that the danger now is, as it has long been in England, that muscle will be cultivated to the neglect of the mind. He particularly condemns the newly introduced fashion of professional clubs perambulating the country for months in succession playing matched games.

The turbulent students of Paris enjoy a rare measure of freedom—or what the Imperial police are accustomed to regard as license—during the prevalence of the war feeling. While they shout "Vive France!" and "Down with Prussia!" they are permitted to sing the Marseillaise without interruption. In the pursuit of national military glory on any pretext the vivacious Parisians speedily forget despotic usurpations and Napoleonic treachery to the Republican cause.

The three most prominent French officers and corps commanders in the present war—McMahon, Bazaine and Canrobert—are all over sixty years of age. The three leading commanders in the Prussian service, besides the Crown Prince—Von Moltke, Manteuffel and Von Roon—are all over sixty, and the first named is seventy years old. The King of Prussia is seventy three and the Emperor of France sixty two years of age. It is likely that some younger men will be heard of on both sides before the war is over.

OREGON

Salem is to have a city calaboose, the Council having accepted a bid to build one for $2[illegible]

The travel from the interior to the coast at the mouth of Salmon river is so great that a regular stage wagon is being run once a week by a Salem man.

The man stabbed near the Fair Ground a few nights since was Leonard Wilkins, an old railroad hand lately from California. He died on Tuesday.

The Jacksonville Sentinel says: From a private letter we learn that the people of Goose Lake valley had a glorious old time on the 4th of July. Mr Junius Holleman delivered the oration, which was an able effort and well received. At night there was a splendid ball given in the valley.

Mr Daniel Waldo of Salem met with a double loss on Tuesday. The Statesman says: "Miss Anna Waldo, youngest daughter of Mr Daniel Waldo, died yesterday at the old residence on the farm in the Waldo hills. She had been lingering in feeble health for a long time, and it is remarkable that her death occurred at 9 o'clock A M, the hour when the flames were consuming the family residence in town."

A Scottish nobleman one day visited a lawyer at his office, in which at the time there was a blazing fire, which lead him to exclaim, "Mr ---, your office is as hot as an oven." "So it should be, my lord," replied the lawyer, "as it is here that I make my bread."

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EASTERN DATES TO AUGUST 3

Rumored Resignation of Secretary Fish

NEW YORK Aug 3—The World has a rumor from Washington that Secretary Fish will soon resign his seat in the Cabinet, which was at first reluctantly accepted by him, and only [illegible] time to relieve President Grant from embarrassing situations in which he had been involved.

LATE CABLE DISPATCHES

LONDON Aug 3—The following is the Prussian account of the attack at Saarbrucken. The [illegible] at this place were attacked by a column of French infantry yesterday, and the enemy was repulsed.

BERLIN Aug 3—The following is the official account of a reconnoissance which was made yesterday by a body of Baden light horse and Prussian hussars. They encountered a French scouting party near Stargenteneaun. The officer was killed and several wounded on the French side, and two wounded on the Prussian side.

PARIS Aug 3—Reports from head quarters received up to 10 o'clock this morning give no change in the military situation.

BERLIN Aug 3—The Prussian Government has summoned a levy en masse to defend the coasts.

LONDON Aug 3, 1 A M—Saarbrucken was taken by the French this morning. Loss slight on both sides.

LONDON Aug 3—The following is given to day as the numbers and disposition of the Prussian army. Duke Mecklenburg commands 10 500 west at the mouth of the Elbe; Gen Falkenstein 55 000 men near Ems; Gen Herwarth De Bitterfeld commands 60 000 men. The army of the Rhine consists of the following: 60 000 men at Coblenz under Gen Steinmetz, 106 000 men at the junction of the Main with the Rhine under Prince Frederick Charles, 180 000 along the Upper Rhine under Prince Royal Frederick William. His Chiefs are Generals Moltke, Blumenthal, Sparling and Schlein.

A dispatch from Paris says £300 sterling is paid for substitutes, and they are scarce at that.

The News this afternoon says the French Government has declined the services of Generals Lee and Beauregard.

LONDON Aug 3—It is rumored to day that negotiations are pending to keep open the ports of Hamburg and Bremen during the war, and that the United States as well as England are urging this.

A new revolving cannon has been tried at Valence and is said to be a great success. A correspondent describes it as a terribly destructive weapon at 1000 yards.

A rumor is circulating here to day to the effect that Weissenburg, a town in Bavaria, on the border has been stormed by the French.

LONDON August 3, 12 M—The following details of Saarbrucken affairs have been received. The fight began at 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon. The French passed the frontier in force and the Prussians were driven from their strong position by the sharp artillery fire of the French. The latter remained masters of the position, which they won without serious loss. The Emperor and Prince Imperial witnessed the conflict and returned to Metz to dinner.

BERLIN August 3—King William has arrived at Mayence and issued a proclamation to the army of Germany assuming commandership in chief.

UTAH

CORINNE August 3—A telegram from F Fetterman says that an Indian runner is just in who represents that Sioux, Cheyennes and Arrapahoes are encamped in the vicinity of Rose Bud and Tongue rivers. The principal chief has 1 500 lodges of Sioux with him. They all propose to be peaceable and say they have no war parties out. No Indians are near the Big Horn expedition.

CORINNE Aug 3—Company B 13th U S Infantry, Maj Osborne commanding, arrived here this afternoon from Fort Benton, Montana, en route to Camp Douglass, Salt Lake. They have been 46 days on the march.

The following is the vote of this Territory: Box Elder county 2 137, Sanpete county 2 153, Millard county 1 249, Beaver county 281, Summit county 150, Weber county 526, Juab county 509, Washington county 570, Davis county 294. The above returns entirely favor the Mormon ticket, excepting Corinne, Wasatch, Terrace, Kelton and Springville, and 27 at Provo. Aggregate liberal vote of Salt Lake City, 167.

NEVADA

AUSTIN August 3—Wells, Fargo & Co shipped last night five bars of bullion from Belmont, of the value of $38 724 09.

To day has been the hottest of the season.

CARSON August 3—The census returns for Ormsby county are completed. The total population is 3 655; Chinese 730. The population of Carson is 2 200.

INTERIOR CALIFORNIA DISPATCHES

YREKA August 3—About 11 o'clock this forenoon the grass in the city cemetery was discovered to be on fire. Everything being very dry, it spread very rapidly, and before the firemen got there nearly all the palings and fences were destroyed. Many monuments and slabs are badly damaged. The fire is supposed to have caught from Chinese joss sticks which they had been burning around their graves.

The weather is intensely hot and sultry. The thermometer at 3 P M to day stood at 108 in the shade.

MARYSVILLE Aug 3—On Sunday last a fight occurred between two Portuguese at Frenchtown, 2½ miles from the Oregon House, about water that they were using to irrigate their gardens. One of the men went to his house and returned with a shot gun, which he held within two or three feet of his antagonist's side, and shot him, killing him almost instantly. The murderer escaped. Both men had families. The murderer is described as five feet four inches high, complexion fair, sandy whiskers, blue eyes, and is thirty three years old. He wore boots that had been foxed.

The residence of J A Hall, at Dr Wilkins' ranch, was broken open Monday night when the family were away, and robbed of two watches, a gold chain and other articles valued at $100.

The fire engine "Our Own," an old Marysville standby, was shipped to the Knickerbocker Engine Company No 5 of Virginia City to day.

[illegible] Neff, a pauper, allowed to remain with his family, the Clerk was ordered to draw warrants for provisions and house rent, not exceeding $16 per month.

The Court adjourned till Saturday, August 6th.

THE BLACK REPUBLICAN CHERRY.—Mr H W Prettyman rejoins thus to the recent letter of Mr Seth Luelling:

Ed Oregonian: Sir, I notice in your paper of July 26th a statement from Mr Seth Luelling in regard to the Black Republican Cherry. Mr L seems to say that I didn't give you a true history of the cherry. I aimed to give a true statement. I said that they are a cross between the Royal Ann and the Black Bigarreau. I stand corrected. I am willing to give Mr L all the credit due him. I have never claimed anything but that Mr L was the originator of this cherry, but I do claim to have a thousand of the bearing trees of this variety in the State, and I also claim that I got the variety of Mr Seth Luelling, and this he will not deny. All persons wishing to obtain those trees can get them at the Railroad Nursery, East Portland, Oregon.

H W PRETTYMAN

THE RECEPTION EXCURSION.—At nine o'clock yesterday morning the committee having in charge the reception of Senator Williams and Gov Cauby, with a large number of invited guests, left the city by the steamer Cascade, expecting to meet the Oriflamme in time to return by the middle of the afternoon or at the latest. Time wore on till the afternoon was well nigh gone, and no word being received either from the steamer or excursion party. At length about half past five [illegible] we received a dispatch from Mr [illegible] who was of the party, sent by express from Rainier to Monticello, and thence by telegraph stating that the steamer had not been seen or sighted, and that the reception party would go on to Astoria. Unless the Oriflamme has met very heavy weather she will arrive [illegible] this message her arrival may not be looked for before [illegible]

FIRE PURPOSELY [illegible]—About 1 o'clock yesterday morning [illegible] we had gone to press the house on Front street occupied by Mrs Easton was discovered on fire and an alarm was raised [illegible]. The fire however [illegible] quickly by the use of buckets before the engines got into play. The flames [illegible] roof and were in danger [illegible] The [illegible] was [illegible] there had been no fire in the [illegible] previous day and [illegible] the building to [illegible] Mrs Ralston [illegible] believed that [illegible] was set on fire [illegible] several times [illegible] at night.

U S DISTRICT COURT—DEADY JUDGE.—Proceedings of Wednesday, August 3d
William C McKay vs James A Campbell argument upon the demurrer to the complaint closed and submitted
The court adjourned to 10 A M, Thursday

RETURNED.—The steamer Onconta with the Democratic receptionists returned about 9 o'clock last evening She went a few miles below the mouth of the Wallamet and no steamship being visible, the party wisely concluded to turn back

GAILY DECKED.—The ship Garibaldi moored at one of the North Portland wharves was gaily decked out with flags of various sorts yesterday—as we suppose in compliment to the distinguished arrivals expected by the Oriflamme

LABOR EXCHANGE.—During July the total number of applications at the Labor Exchange, for employment, was 138, total number of engagements to labor 65

Solar Disturbances

THE GREATEST OF ALL FUTURE POSSIBILITIES

The sun is beginning to be an object of great anxiety to many scientific men Spots on that orb are not at all uncommon as may be ascertained by any one who may take the trouble to look at it through a bit of smoked glass But these phenomena have at last assumed an appearance which astonishes astronomers and it is calculated to alarm that class which fancies it can detect portents of the future in the heavens There are great gulfs now to be seen in the sun each much larger than this earth, which we think of so much consequence in the universe They increase at a prodigious rate and sometimes seem destined to work a convulsion similar to that which lights and warms this world have been shattered to pieces or disappeared, and only the philosopher in his roving glance over the sky has detected the change The inhabitants of other planets would not notice the disappearance of the planet we inhabit any more than we can see a speck of sand carried off by the wind on the sea shore

It is not a mere theory but an ascertained fact, that the sun is always in a highly fluid condition—as one recent writer describes it a hurricane of flame the disturbance of which might be best represented to our imaginations by the occasional explosion of a planet or two of nitro glycerine It is moreover subject to "magnetic storms" produced as many suppose, by the movements of planets around it The great disturbance which is now going on was predicted months ago by scientific men That we are much more concerned in the event than many people suppose is quite certain Self registering magnetic instruments have revealed the fact that whenever a spot breaks out on the sun the earth thrills under a mysterious magnetic influence

In one case, a few years ago it is upon record that telegraph machinery was set on fire, and the "pen of Bain's telegraph was followed by a flame at the very instant a sudden burst of light showed itself in the sun In the telegraph stations at Philadelphia and Washington the signal men received strong electric shocks In fact the electric condition of the earth was changed though by what precise agency none can fully explain We are at once lost in a region of conjecture and can only feel that the fate which was foretold of old for the earth may at any time overtake it The forces are all in existence by which in the solemn language of holy writ the heavens shall pass away, with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up

Once in every eleven years the sun exhibits the stupendous phenomena which are at present engaging the attention of philosophers In 18... ... and abysses similar to those which are now reported were seen by many observers The recurrence was predicted for 1870 Great disturbances in the world have usually accompanied these outbreaks though what it should happen is an other of the unfathomable mysteries of the universe In 1848 ... we ... and we had a ... In 1859 they occurred and we saw war in Europe

The electrical condition of the atmosphere is the ... exert a great ... the minds of men and nations than many are willing to believe ... The telegraphs denote the change ... condition of the earth but they cannot ... eat the ... In the large ... of the ... whose description of the sun we ... just printed, ... of all our telegraph wires may some day transmit the ... handwriting more ... than did ... the handwriting which during Belshazzar's feast traced a warning on the wall of a fall of Babylonian dynasty —New York Times

OUR CITIZENS certainly deserve credit for the energy they display to make the Oregon Immigration and Labor Exchange a success and benefit to the State, as well as the immigrant coming to our State Every one should give all the aid in their power to help the large number of strangers coming to our State and not forget to inform them that Kohn & Nishel, No. 91 Front street, have the largest stock of clothing in Oregon other goods are of superior quality and sold at extreme low prices

WHY MR MOTLEY WAS RECALLED FROM ENGLAND.—A Washington correspondent writes to the New York Times July 15

As it has been freely stated both publicly and privately that the President removed Mr Motley in order to revenge himself on Mr Sumner for the latter's opposition to the San Domingo treaty it is proper though hardly necessary to state some facts in connection with the matter which will show how absurd such statements are When Mr Motley left here for England he received instructions on the principal question at issue between the two Governments, which instructions were in close consonance with certain views expressed by Mr Motley prior to his departure and which views had been disapproved when they were first made known On his arrival in England Mr Motley submitted to Lord Clarendon the views which had been disapproved here and omitted to submit the views which had been impressed upon him by his Government This produced a feeling of dissatisfaction here and from that moment the question of his recall has been a question of time He has been allowed to remain from considerations of a personal character among which the permanent nature of his domestic arrangements has been one Sometime since he was informed that his resignation would be accepted and he was requested to answer by cable To this Mr Motley made no answer whatever Subsequently an answer was again asked for when he declined finally to resign The original request for his resignation was made long enough before Mr Frelinghuysen's appointment to have enabled Mr Motley to have tendered it, had he so desired

BOY SMOKERS.—The Louisville Journal has the following

Here and there about the street corners and around the doors of amusement you will see a lot of urchins, some of them decently clad and presenting a respectable appearance who are engaged in asserting their manhood by puffing away execrable cigars It is fair to presume that their anxious mammas are not aware of the foul habits their darling boys pick up and practice outside of the paternal roof but for their benefit they should know that it is stated that a French physician has investigated the effect of smoking on thirty eight boys between the ages of nine and fifteen who were addicted to the habit Twenty seven presented distinct symptoms of nicotine poison In twenty two there were serious disorders of the circulation indigestion dullness of intellect and a marked appetite for strong drinks In three there was heart affection in eight decided deterioration of the blood in twelve there was frequent epistaxis ten had disturbed sleep and four had ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth It is easy then to see how the ranks of the drunkards and dissolute men "about town" are recruited when there are so many boys in training for delirium tremens and all the horrors of dissipation.

A horrible occurrence is reported from a small village in the vicinity of the city of Breig Prussia The hostess of a tavern in that village ordered her servants to take a man who was lying drunk in front of her house to a hayloft so that he might recover his sober senses during the night As the hostler went up the hayloft next morning a horrible sight met his eyes Rats had attacked the man who was lying in a beastly intoxication and had eaten off his face almost entirely His ears nose the lower eyelids the cheeks the lips and the chin had been gnawed off entirely the eyeballs were injured but not destroyed and the sinews of the jaws were severed The man who presented a frightful spectacle, was taken to the hospital of Breig where this extraordinary case causes a great deal of astonishment After suffering terribly for some days the unfortunate man died

A Broadside for Humbugs

Impudence and assurance generally go hand in hand and of all the tribe of pretenders ... with which society is afflicted the inactive medicine men who attempt to tamper with the health of the community are the most dangerous and the most impudent

So much by way of Text Now for a special and particular application

It appears that a mushroom growth of so called Bitters is springing up under different names in various localities particularly in the Southern and Western States which the vendors have the hardihood to recommend to easy going people upon whom they think they can impose as a substitute for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, long recognized by every class as the purest and best medicated stimulant and invigorant the world affords

The collections referred to being composed of worthless material ... offer a larger margin for profit than that Celebrated Tonic and hence the anxiety of dollar worshipping dealers to foist them upon the public in its place

But forewarned is forearmed and all parties whom these distinguished ... beings are endeavoring to ... and ... into substituting trash for a standard remedy are hereby informed of the selfish and sordid motives which underlie these representations in question.

The great popularity and vast sales of Hostetter's Bitters cannot, of course be seriously impaired by these tricks of trade, but as the debilitated and suffering have a direct interest in the matter it is only a matter of common humanity to put them on their guard

Waiting

Come, for I am [illegible] waiting
[illegible]
I see [illegible]
Unless you are waiting [illegible] too

The grass [illegible]
[illegible]
The sweet welcome sound of your footsteps
Makes [illegible] in the sky

So waiting and watching I wonder
W[illegible] to-day
And the day seems a week at the least, dear,
That finds you still staying away

The song-birds will carol far sweeter
For knowing and and seeing you're nigh
E'en the flowers will waft forth their fragrance
To greet you as hither you hie

The loss of life's sunshine, my darling,
Your [illegible] alone will restore
No music so dear as the sound of
Your hand on the latch of the door

Story of a Big Diamond.

"You think there are no exciting adventures to be gone through nowadays, do you?" said my friend Maxwell [illegible] when wound up into a story-telling humor, and the hour was that when wondrous tales are more congenial to the human mind than they are by daylight. "Well, you're wrong. There's a fellow at this moment in London who unearthed one of the biggest diamonds in the world, and that after a series of risks the remembrance of which is quite enough to last a life time."

"You're joking, Jim," I said, "or you're furbishing up one of your father's old tales. I remember what a wonderful talent he had in that way."

"No, you're wrong again; what I'm talking about only happened last year, and is a positive fact."

Without waiting for my assent he at once settled down into his regular story-telling tone of voice, and, after drawing a good light into his pipe, said: "Do you know young Bogle?"

"Do you mean Bogle of Bogle & Swallow's, the jewelers?"

"Yes, young Bogle, not the old man. Well, he knew an old Jew who dealt in diamonds, and who, albeit a shabby-looking old fellow, had correspondence in all quarters where precious stones were to be had. He lived in a miserable way somewhere in one of the back streets in Shoreditch, and as far as the neighbors could say, had neither kith nor kin—his only attendant being a little orphan Jew boy called Ephraim. One day the lad came into Bogle & Swallow's and asked for young Bogle.

"He's wanted very bad to go and see old Jacob Ezra," he said to one of the young men in the shop; "please tell him my message."

In a minute or two young Bogle came down into the shop, and asked what was the matter with old Ezra.

"He told me to run to you and ask you to to come and see him, as he has something very important to tell you. It's diamonds, sir," he whispered, "but that's all I know, and the old man's very bad, and says he'll die perhaps before you reach him."

Young Bogle was a fine, dashing, handsome fellow, and had often heard of curious adventures connected with gems of great value; he was therefore quite ready to anticipate something out of the common way in this message from old Ezra, and jumping into a cab with young Ephraim, was driven as fast as possible into the city. Young Ephraim led the way into a dirty old street and up to the old Jew's room. He was lying on an Oriental looking bed, such as is used in India, called a charpoy, and was wrapped up in two or three old fur cloaks.

"Ha! you've come to see the old man; that's good. I thought you were an able and and kind, ever since you helped me to keep that poor girl, Miriam, from the streets. She's dead now. She was of my tribe, and we Jews stick to one another, but we don't trust each other much in money matters—we trust no one, and I wouldn't have made up my mind to tell you what I am going to if the job could be done any other way. Iphra," said he to the boy, who was squatted on an old Persian rug—"Iphra, my son, hand me the sherbet, and leave the room."

The moment the boy left, Jacob took young Bogle's hand, and his voice changed from the usual wheedling tone of his nation to one very different, his eyes flashed, his hand trembled, and he talked quickly and excitedly.

"I may not live through this illness. I have a letter from Constantinople from one of my people, who says that there is a diamond to be had the like of which is only to be seen in one or two of the great courts of Europe. Diamonds are subject to a heavy tax in Turkey, and although it is not known to your unsuspecting Franks, there is a secret understanding that no remarkable gem leaves the country without having been sent to the Sultan and one or two of his head courtiers for inspection. The owner of this stone knows that if it were seen by the Sultan it would be at once appropriated, under the pretense of purchase, but really he would never be fully paid, and probably, if he importuned for his money, a wink to one of the eunuchs about the harem would get him poisoned or put out of the way secretly. He is a pacha of a very old family, but he wants money badly, and will take £5,000 for the stone, if any one, a perfect stranger, will come and take it away as he may appoint. You are English, and brave, and a stranger; will you buy this stone? I swear by Father Ibraheem that I will tell no other but you, and I will give you a letter to Benjamin Bagdadee, a Jew tobacco dealer in Constantinople, who will tell you more when you meet."

Bogle's heart beat faster as he saw his way to a regular out-and-out adventure, and thanking the old man warmly, said he would be off next day if he liked.

"But what will you get out of it, Ezra?" he said.

"O, my friend has settled all that with the pacha; and should I not recover from this illness, what would be the use of money to me? If you come back safe you can remember me. No, we Jews love or hate quickly, strongly. I like you—go; it will make your fortune. But be secret, or your life will be the forfeit; there are men in Constantinople about the court who would poison or stab you as soon as they would eat. Here is the letter to Benjamin. And one thing more: beware of the dragomans; they are all rascals and spies."

Young Bogle thanked the old man, offered to send in a doctor of his own persuasion, which he permitted, and then hastened back to tell his seniors something of what he had heard. Determined not to tell all, for fear that they might think the risk too great, he braced his nerves up to carry through the [illegible].

In due time he found himself in Constantinople, went to the best hotel, gave himself out as an agent for the purchase of wheat en route to Odessa, and began to make inquiries for any freight that might be available in the port. After a day or two he asked his dragoman if he knew the Jews' quarter.

"O, yes," the man replied, "but there is not much to interest you there."

"O, I dare say not; but I am [illegible], you know, and must see everything. [illegible] there this evening."

"Very good, your Excellency. To-night at eight o'clock we will go."

Bogle only wished to gain, on his first visit, a general knowledge of the place, and at the time appointed strolled through the quarter, taking mental notes as he went along, and then, as unconcernedly as he could, asked a few questions as to where the [illegible] merchants lived, was shown the place, and so back to his hotel.

The dragoman was that incarnation of everything subtle, a Levantine; but whether Greek or Mahometan the devil himself could not have told. He passed as a Greek, with a Greek name a foot long, and had recommendations by the score; still for all that he did not gain Bogle's confidence, and so far he had fished out nothing from his master.

Bogle of course had invested in Turkish dress the first time he went to the bazaar, but he had also brought out a perfectly natural red beard and wig from England, disguised in which his own mother would not have known him.

Got up in these, and with a cloak on, he slipped out of his room next evening, and glided quickly away to the Jews' quarter.

Seeing a respectable looking old man in his shop, he saluted him and asked if he understood French or English.

"Not very much," he answered—"enough to sell you some very good tobacco."

"Thank you, I'll have some. Give me a [illegible] of [illegible] stake," [illegible]. "[illegible]

"You [illegible] most of [illegible] merchants [illegible] say?"

"Yes, most of them."

"Do you know Benjamin Bagdadee?"

"Right well; we are related by [illegible]. That is his house inside that court [illegible] the street."

Bogle thanked him and walked [illegible] indicated. The first person [illegible] was a [illegible] and [illegible]. He asked [illegible] "Is Benjamin Bagdadee at home?"

It was evident she [illegible] what he said, but she [illegible] him to the door of the left just inside the entrance.

Bogle knocked. A voice said something which he took for "Come in."

He entered, and bowing to an old man seated on some cushions, said in English:

"Do I salute Benjamin Bagdadee?"

"Yes," he [illegible] gravely, "but why?"

Bogle quickly took his letter from his breast pocket and showed it.

"Ah, you are from Jacob Ezra. Sit down. But no, not here. Come with me."

He left the room, went up some stairs, along a passage, opened a heavy narrow door, up some more steps, and entered a small room in a turret of the house. He sat down [illegible] Bogle on the carpet, and carefully read the letter.

"Has Ezra explained the risk of your [illegible]?" said he after a while.

"Yes, some of it."

"You English are brave, but not cunning."

Here Bogle quietly took off his false wig and beard.

"Ha! that is well! By Zebub [illegible] Good," he said, and laughed gently [illegible]. "Who is your dragoman?" he asked.

"Nicholas [illegible]."

"I know him; he is a spy. Take [illegible] him."

"I thought he was no good," said Bogle, "but I suppose they are all pretty nearly birds of a feather?"

"Yes, they are; but forewarned is forearmed. Now about this letter, holding up Ezra's [illegible].

"My friend Ezra says you can afford to pay the money for this wonderful stone, and I dare say you can easily give a check for the sum. But the fact is, the amount must be paid in gold, and in no other way. I can arrange this for you through my people, and as I have Ezra's guarantee I will take your check on Paris or Vienna or London, as it may suit you best. The Pacha has agreed to pay me a commission on the sale, so that is settled, and you have nothing to thank me for. The great thing is the risk in your getting the stone out of the country; for if you were known to have it about you, you would run a good chance of being murdered, leaving alone the probability of the government there confiscating it, or fining you to some outrageous extent. However, you must trust to your good fortune, and now I will tell you about this gem. The Pacha is of a very old Turkish family, who have intermarried [illegible] times with one of the Mogul Princes of India, and it is through them this stone came into his possession. Tradition says that it is the smaller half of the Koh-i-noor, which was broken in two when it was first found at Golconda. There is a short inscription in [illegible] on it, but what the words are I know not. It is as long and thick as the first joint of your thumb, is quite uncut, and is jagged at one end, where there seems to be a flaw. This you must look to. If it is only a refraction of light from a rough point it does not matter, but you are doubtless an expert and must judge for yourself. If you will come back in two days, I will arrange for you to see the stone, and will also see how much gold I can collect among my brethren."

Bogle thanked the old man, took his leave, and at the end of the two days was punctual to his appointment.

Benjamin received him kindly and said: "All goes well. I have arranged for you to see the stone thus. You will be taken by a kuwass of the pacha's, whom you will meet in the suburbs, on horseback into the country. At night you will return to the pacha's palace in the outskirts of the town, and if you approve the stone you will have to remain there till the bargain is concluded, as the pacha swears he will have no going backwards or forwards to your hotel for fear of your visits being found out. If you approve, I will bring the money to you."

This was settled, and on the eventful evening Bogle met the pacha's servant, who had a led horse with him, rode half-a-dozen miles, and then back again. He was then ushered into a court yard, thence into a long stone verandah, up a flight of stairs, through a doorway closed by heavy curtains, into a room handsomely carpeted and cushioned, and told to sit down.

In about half an hour, during which the silence and mysteriousness of the affair began to tell on Bogle's pulsation, one of the eunuchs—a negro of course—came in and beckoned him to follow. Another curtained room or two brought them into a small one, meanly furnished, in which sat, on a few cushions in one corner, an old woman. The eunuch salamaned and left.

"You speak French?" the woman said.

"Yes," said Bogle, "but not very well."

"I am the pacha's wife's attendant," she said, "and as I speak French I am deputed to show you something."

Out of the muslin rag she took the diamond. It was a monster. There were two or three good lamps in the room, and Bogle, after a long and careful examination and trial in his scales, found it was perhaps the fifth largest known diamond in the world, and of undoubted good water, although it was in quite a rough state.

There were some chances of course of it not proving eventually—that is, after being cut—of the first water, but Bogle knew from what Benjamin had said that he would get it cheap, and that the great risk was not so much as to its quality, but in getting it out of the country without its being confiscated.

"What will you give?" the slave girl then asked.

"How much do you want?" said Bogle.

"This stone is one of the wonders of the world," said the girl. "It came from India, and has been in my master's family for a dozen generations. Although of fabulous worth, we will take twenty thousand pounds for it."

Bogle had been prepared for haggling, but this was a staggerer, and after a great deal of talk he offered five thousand pounds, which the girl said she would report in the proper quarter. "In the meantime," she said, "you will sleep here, and in the morning matter can be concluded."

Bogle was taken by the eunuch who had shown him into the palace [illegible] in the Frank fashion, and [illegible] passed a troubled night.

In the morning his terms were accepted, and a message being sent to his Jew friend, he duly came with the money, and it [illegible] counted over. Now came the difficulty of dealing with the diamond. It was not safe to carry it about on his person, nor to [illegible] the hotel; in fact, nowhere. At last Benjamin advised Bogle to make up two packets exactly alike, one containing the diamond, the other containing nothing, the former to be sent by post to Bogle's friends in [illegible], the latter to be [illegible] carried by him to the hotel and [illegible].

Bogle [illegible] and pretending not to know the way, requested that [illegible] might show him to the British [illegible], where he might intrust his money to post the precious packet as a [illegible] letter. This he managed all safely, and with the false packet in his breast walked back to the hotel. His absence for the whole night had of course been duly noted, and his dragoman made minute inquiries as to his health, hoping he had not got into any mischief.

"Oh no, Nicholas," said Bogle, "I met a friend who took me home to [illegible], and would not let me go through the streets at night, so I remained with him. I think I shall start for Odessa by the first steamer, and shall be obliged by your going and enquiring when she starts."

Of course Bogle intended to forfeit the passage-money to Odessa, and to take another passage by the first steamer to Trieste, which he knew left in a day or so. He went that morning and secured his berth, and resolved to [illegible] He never could [illegible] He had left [illegible] Turkish [illegible] Bogle went to [illegible] at once arrested [illegible] Bogle [illegible] perhaps [illegible] see the light, and ruin an [illegible] of adventure [illegible]
